

THE INDISPENSABLE ANSON

Flight, August 5th, 1948.

New in everything but basic design the Anson XX is the latest version of an aircraft that has made itself indispensable to Air Crew training. Chosen by the R.A.F. for navigation, bombing and radio training, the Anson XX embodies all those characteristics sought for in a modern trainer of this type: economy in operation and maintenance, ample cabin room for pupils and instructor and pleasant flying characteristics. Now in quantity production, it is available for prompt delivery.
